ginning for his backers, although he is a ginning for his backers, although he is a proverbial bad actor. There was some delay at the post, and it was getting dark fast so that everybody was yelling for the barrier to go up. Mr. Cassidy finally got the field away well, Killierankie assuming the lead down by the grandstand. As the turn was reached Ocean Spray went to the front, and he led around into the back stretch, where Notter sent up Ivanhoe, and from then on it was a procession for the latter, who came

Killiecrankie hung on well, capturing the place, with Ocean Spray in third place. Only two favorites won, and McDaniel and Notter each had two firsts, Brussel getting the other,

CORNELL MAY BE

Some Reasons Why the Ithacans Are Likely to Defeat Pennsylvania.

Now that Harvard and Yale have played their annual foot ball game the intercollegiate world is looking with more interest than ever before to the closing gridiron struggle of the year between Cornell and Pennsylvania at Philadelphia on Thanksgiving day. Indeed, from the foot ball point of view only one game has been played this year which outranks this one in importance, this being the Yale-Princeton game a week ago. Both Cornell and Pennsylvania have proven unusually strong this year, and victory for one or the other will mean much in the rating of the two teams for the year. Were it not for the fact that both teams have a defeat chalked up against them this game would settle beyond a doubt the intercollegiate cham-yond a doubt the intercollegiate championship.

The Pennsylvania record is marred by the Indian defeat, while Pennsylvania State College caught Cornell at an unguarded moment and by means of two clever field goals scored an 8-6 victory. Pennsylvania men have been trying to forget that they ever played the Indians, but had this game to be played over again there is no doubt that the Quakers, with the great improvement they have made, could trounce the Indians without much difficulty. Since that game cennsylvania has been coming along with big strides, and has won all her succeeding games without being scored against.

Cornell, likewise, took a great brace Cornell, likewise took a great brace after her only defeat, and has been playing as consistent a game as any of the other teams since. It need occasion no surprise if Cornell is made the favorite over Pennsylvania for this game. This is due to the fact that the Ithacans defeated Princeton, West Point and Swarthmore on successive Saturdays. Against two of these teams, Princeton and West Point, the Cornell eleven did better than Yale. It will be remembered that Yale could do no better against West Point than 0-0, while the Elis' margin over Princeton was only 12-10. Cornell beat West Point 14-10 and won from Princeton 6-5. But an analysis of the Cornell scores shows more powerful than Yale will justify Cornell in making a bid for premier honors in case her team defeats Pennsyl-

Cornell, however, will do well not to underrate this Pennsylvania team. The Quakers had an off day when they met the Indians, and they have retrieved them-selves since that game in brilliant fashion. If comparative scores had not al-ready been proven absolutely untrustworthy one would be justified in picking Pennsylvania to beat the Ithacans because of the scores the two teams made against Pennsylvania State. This is the team that beat Cornell 8-6, but three weeks later the same eleven was slaughtered by Pennsylvania, 28-0.

Cornell Heavier.

The Cornell eleven has the advantage over Pennsylvania in the matter of weight, but with the new foot ball this does not begin to count as it did a few years ago.

The Quakers found themselves badly outweighed by Swarthmore and Michigan, weighed by Swarthmore and Michigan, beautiful and the work handlik angular to straight the baden 12 over Pennsylvania in the matter of weight, yet they won handily enough. In straight vie buchen. foot ball Pennsylvania is undoubtedly Goodman... foot ball Pennsylvania is undoubtedly much superior to Cornell, for the Red and Blue back field is one of the best in the country, and can undoubtedly do more effective work than that of Cornell. The Ithacans seem to have the better line, but if the lighter Pennsylvanians by quick and effective charging can hold their own with Cornell's forwards the tide of battle will be turned in favor of the team which makes the best use of the forward pass and does the best end running. The Cornell team has been notably effective in the use of the forward pass all season, and as Pennsylvania has been bothered in forming a defense for the play the Ithaforming a defense for the play the Itha-cans will probably make good use of it. There is no lack of confidence on the part of the Pennsylvania team. The Quakers think that they can beat Cornell with almost any kind of a team, and the record of previous games indicates as much. This is the crucial game of the year for Cornell, and many of the Ithacans' best teams have unaypectedly game. cans' best teams have unexpectedly gone to pieces on Franklin Field. It will be remembered that a year ago Cornell should have beaten Penn instead of being held to a 0-0 score. Whenever the Pennsylvania players show a weakening in the defense all the coaches have to do is to refer to this great stand and the effect is magical.

Pennsylvania and Cornell have played fourteen games to date. Of this number Pennsylvania has won twelve, lost one and been tied in one. The only time that Cornell ever defeated Pennsylvania was in 1900, when the poorest team the Quakers ers ever had since they became factors in foot ball lost 24-6. Yale's Great Rally. The victory of the Yale elevenPrinceton a week ago, when the Elis won out 12-10, scoring all their points in the second half, will likely be referred to as the most exceptional performance ever made by a Yale team. It was, indeed, an example of Yale grit, and Yale graduates and undergraduates as well are justified in the pride they are taking in the 1907 eleven. If Yale's team did nothing else this season that performance against this season that performance against Princeton would entitle the team to a niche in Yale's hall of foot ball fame. This reversal has but one parallel in foot ball history. In 1902 Pennsylvania performed an achievement quite as notable. At the end of the first half of the Cornell game the score stood 11-0 in favor of Cornell. Seeing or thinking that Penn was beaten the Ithacans offered to shorten the second half to save the Quakers further humiliation. This offer was re-fused and the weaker Quaker team came back in the second half so strong that the big Cornell eleven was swept off its feet and beaten 12-11. That was another example of invincible nerve and courage.

Others, Except the Marines, Are in Striking Distance.

After a most successful season, when the first two teams fought it neck and neck for the championship, which was decided only by the total number of pins, the Real Estate Amateur Bowling League is again in the limelight this year. This league is one of the best roling on the local alleys and contains some of the most skillful bowlers in the District. The Columbia team, which won the championship last season, is not a member of the league this year, having been succeeded by the Marines, who are making a poor showing, having been unable to win a single game so far. The league season is well advanced, each team having played fifteen games, the Potomacs being slightly in the lead, having won twelve games with a percentage of .800. The Lawyers are in second position and are pressing the leaders. The others are strung out in striking distance, and with a little more prac-tice will be right up in line. In the team average the Potomacs stand first, with an an analysis of the Cornell scores shows that Cornell's superiority was much more marked than these figures would indicate. Princeton scored against Cornell only by a blocked kick, while in view of the fact that the ball was nearly always in the Tigers' territory the Ithacans should have won by about 12-0. West Point scored its 10 points against Cornell by a touc...down from a blocked kick and a field goal. These facts and the unanimous statement of the cadets that Cornell was more powerful than Yale will justify TEAM STANDING

CITY PARK TRACK

Notwithstanding the Bleak Weather Over 10,000 Persons Are Present-Outlaws Barred.

Special Dispatch to The Star. NEW ORLEANS, La., November 23 .-The horsemen and track followers who were under the impression that the "outlaw" rule, or rather the interpretation of the American Turf Association's rule regarding those who have raced at unrecognized meetings, would be abrogated were rudely awakened today. To one and all Manager Winn gave notice that all entries of horses which have performed or the owners or trainers of which have taken part in the racing at Lawyers in Second Place, the new Louisiana Jockey Club's halfmile track or the track across the Mississippi at Algiers, known as Suburban Park, would be barred both from the City Park and the Fair Grounds tracks.
"We do not intend to bother our heads," said Mr. Winn, "about what our so-called rivals may or may not do. We have enough troubles of our own at present. So far as our rulings are concerned we will not even recognize that these tracks are in operation. Coup on Pinkola.

In the first event, W. H. Fizer had a soft spot reserved for Pinkola, and made no secret of the fact. The best price ever laid against the son of Pink Coat was 7 to 10, and the knowing ones considered this safe enough to back the odds to 3 to because of wire delay.
